I am a committed and passionate Assistant Professor of Economics with a strong academic background and a continuous drive for growth in both teaching and research. I have qualified NET and earned distinctions in my academic pursuits. I actively seek to enhance my skills through various certifications in economics, data analysis, sustainability, and communication. I have published research papers, presented at national and international conferences, and constantly aim to integrate practical and modern approaches into my teaching. I am deeply interested in fostering a meaningful learning environment and contributing to policy-relevant research in economics.
